Zou Kunnen Head back up those curving stairs, then straight across to the arch to the west that leads to another set of curving stairs (/waypoint -454, 0.29, -56) Streak down past those Protector of Magic and do the speedy crafter routine one last time. What? Loremaster Verdandi says to you, "Ah, yes. Please note that the coin-rent reducing banners (Di'Zok Honor Banner, Sathirian Honor Banner), do not seem to be giving the coin rent reduction unless they are placed by the house owner. You need to find a key in all that mess, but don't go off half-informed! Avoid the moving goo mobs, carefully jump up onto those little retaining walls and fish from there. A Surprise Visit The last crystal is placed and drained of power. Get the basket located at 22,-.79,-69 Return to Neeta to be awarded achievement experience, 30-some gold, and your class recipe. Now, most of those ingredients may not be familiar to you, but you used some of that wax the last time you were in here, so the room with the mortar and pestle is a good place to start. This limits the size of the book, though the compression helps us squeeze as much as possible out of the storage space. Bear Hide Notebook Reptile Hide Notebook The Terrors of Thalumbra expansion added the following notebooks to the sage lineup. Then pick up Fond Memories. I cannot leave the council at present." You say to Brell Serilis, "Er ... We can make stronger, lighter armor nowdays, but it pleases me to keep the old traditions." Sadly, when you steer the conversation to Loremaster Boranin and the prayer shawl, she talks about the fine craftsmanship of the shawl just before she tells you that the shawl itself, haven't been seen for at least two centuries. Keep on wandering from fishing spot, avoiding goo, until you fish up the overseer's key. Furniture features that you should be aware of: Holding down shift and moving the mousewheel while placing or moving furniture will resize it. You can fill your hall with tapestries of your own guild's heraldry, or get guild allies (or enemies, for that matter, if you're so inclined) to place their heraldry in your hall. Progress or innovation potions and/or more crafting gear might be good, too. (Make certain you select the Outfitter Errands version of the instance!) Of course, if that were all there were to it, you'd not need a guide, now, would you? Hosted By: Page 14 On top of looking lovely in your home, most furniture can also reduce/remove the weekly status cost of status-based housing. You say to Tora, "All right ... I haven't been there myself, so I can't give you exact directions. Other than looks (and material costs), there is no difference between the notebooks - all hold the same amount of text. Did you not see the ghostly kromzek pressing the attack? This book contains recipes for 10 floor tiles that any level 90 crafter can make, using common tier 9 resources. You will find that the clay is spawned during most of the Tupta dailies, but not all of them, so don't count on it being available at the last minute, and plan ahead. Common altars (level 35 recipes) use: 9 severed briarwood, 2 feyiron clusters, 1 etched leather pelt, 8 garnet sandpaper. Hosted By: Page 24 Due to various issues (including the San Diego fires of 2007 changing schedules and priorities in a giant ripple effect), the faction-specific crafting recipes were not released at the same time as the rest of the Rise of Kunark expansion. If you are pulling these items from shared bank or the guild bank and do not get an update for that step in your quest journal, drop the offending item(s) in a broker box, then pull it back out again. I repeat, he's busy and grumpy. If you're easily confused, ignore this paragraph, and do what works for you best. Time Is Short Once you enter into the right area for each step, a 60-second timer will start, so prep as much as you need to before you go searching for the first (Paixao). Perhaps this will help as a refresher: Danelak Hosfoak says to you, "There's one story I heard, about the Cabbageleaf family and some of the remarkable jewelry they learned to create. This will save you some precious time lost while you revive, etc. I've forgotten more than you'll ever taking a wander towards the forge area. It blends in well with the room, and may be hidden behind cobwebs, but somewhere in one of those two alcoves is a vase. (This means you should take lag into consideration if you're doing it on the heavy server load expansion launch day, for example.) The guardians for each area are on a 65-second invisible timer that starts at the same time as the visible 60-second timer (an extra 5 seconds after the visible timer runs out, basically), so don't stand around to pat yourself on the back, but run back out of the room and out of aggro range before you break between combines. Either way, good luck." Praying for Aid Perhaps a prayer wouldn't hurt! If you are also a tinkerer and have done all the Iceclad Ocean crafting quests, you already know of one method to pray to Brell -- gnomish pirate spirits left on Brell's altar! If you aren't a high enough level tinker to have done Fenwick's tinkering quests, never fear. It is still very doable, just don't dilly-dally before or after. You ask if you can take it, since it is very important to the coldain. They were able to pass on to the Halls of the Creator." Loremaster Verdandi says to you, "But why the glow?" You say to Loremaster Verdandi, "It seems my actions pleased Brell. Crafters who own the Earring of the Solstice will also be able to see red tradeskill glowie collections (no need for it to be equipped to see the red ones), and will be able to see blue collections in Faydwer and Kunark when they have the earring equipped. Hosted By: Page 12 Some people go for gear with high STR, others go for gear with high STA, and so on. But , I told you, that prayer shawl is long lost. You will have to sneak around a special instance of the Nest of the Great Egg, collecting 3 items: a bolt of cloth, a sickle, and a book about crafting hammers. Yes, one step will require fresh clay, a ground spawn for the Tupta daily crafting quest. Are you on the step to find Dalnir? But I have a surprise for you. How can you set the walls, floors and trim so that they show off your lovely furniture properly? It was phenomenal to see such a lovely outpouring of community cooperation. Through the Gauntlet There are quite a few ghosts in that first room, including one lurking in the lefthand corner as you enter the room. It can't be, it looks in such good condition for its age. Smish it, and you get the first key that you need. See that blue-green and gold ... But why should I not destroy you

Alas, it has been lost for two centuries at least." In addition, so many of the records have been lost since the Cataclysm, that she doesn't hold out hope of being able to re-make it from scratch, much less of getting it blessed once it was made. We hoped to use the residue of your blessing to set them free." Brell Serilis says to you, "Thank you for your good intent, small mortal, but these poor brave warriors appear to be serving a valuable task for their people. Several of these quests also give you recipes or access to harvestable house items that you get to keep after the quest is completed. Their deaths did not displease you?" Brell Serilis says to you, "Enough, small mortal. However, I spoke to a halfling who claimed to be the descendent of Rebecca Cabbageleaf, one of Rivervale's most famous artisans. But how do you figure out what the various pieces of furniture look like without buying and placing them? Special Situations Then come special cases, that don't fit

Mouse over until you find something actionable, and grab yourself "a weighty tome" ... Move into the room and place the third closer to the last rat. (The crafted altars reduce your purchase cost for blessings and miracles in comparison to the quested altars - see chart below the images for details.) All crafted altars are no value. Hang a left, smudge more ghosts out of existence with incense, and keep heading deeper into the temple. Often, your hardest task will be remembering exactly where to find your quest NPC when you're ready to complete the quest! NEW! Level 120 Reign of Shadows Tradeskill Signature Line went live on December 15, 2020 For the Beginner While you can skip directly to the tradeskill tutorial (or skip them altogether), we recommend that you do all three of these quests, in the order listed, to start your career off with the instructions and supplies that you need. There are heroic aggro rats 15-20 levels or so above your adventuring level all over the instance. You do not have to complete those three unlocked quests rewards within the deity progression, there are carpenter-made versions of the altars. (And yes, you must be level 80 in your crafting profession to obtain them.) These quests all begin with the same quest starter, but then branch off for the fourth quest based on class, then reconverge for the fifth quest. For those who are used to being proactive and key-mashing every single round, you likely don't need all that. Unless they have all 9 crafting classes already at level 80 or above, even the most independent and antisocial crafter will need to work with other crafters and the commission system in order to receive the rewards. But that is not the guestion you really want answered." You say to Capru. "It isn't? The range for the incense is just barely more than the aggro range for the ghosts, so you'll want to find the technique that works for you. There is, however more that needs to be done to repair it, so it is time to go back to Nye'Caelona as
